Urban Regeneration and Development Fund (URDF)

Next Steps

DHPLG will be meeting with successful applicants (over December/January) to discuss the detail of funding allocations and agreed progression of proposals while formal feedback on unsuccessful applications will be compiled in December for issue.

Given that the process involved in finalising agreements with successful applicants is currently on-going, project conditions will only be concluded after this process which in part involves commercially sensitive information or proposals subject to a formal consent or acquisition process at a later point. The appraisal process involves an appeal mechanism for unsuccessful applicants, within a specified time period, which they can utilise once notified of their markings.

It is expected that a second call for proposals for 2020 funding will be launched in early 2019. A workshop will be organised in advance to prepare applicants and local authorities for the next call (and for DHPLG to receive feedback) and prior to the development of the next call.

It is envisaged that this application period will run until summer 2019.
