Settlement agreed following negotiations on day of hearing

A divorce settlement was made in relation to three assets of a former couple at Dublin Circuit Family Court.

The case had been listed for hearing but following discussions the applicant husband 's barrister told the Court the matter had been resolved. The barrister said the issues concerned three assets: a house, an apartment and a business. It was agreed the family home would be sold and the respondent wife would move into the apartment.

The husband 's barrister asked for the matter to be reviewed by the judge again in 2027, telling the Court the sale of the business "would be well on its way or completed" but "certain steps have to be taken."

The judge commended the parties on reaching agreement and said she would strike out the motion by consent on the terms handed into court. She granted liberty to re-enter the matter on seven days' notice.
