summer festivals: The West Cork Chamber Music Festival offers 44 events and 18 masterclasses; the West Cork Literary Festival offers 77 events, many of them free of charge; and the Masters of Tradition festival offers eight terrific concerts and 14 masterclasses.

It's not about money. Not really, but in this age of sovereign bailouts, failing states and uncertain currencies, Francis said: 'Every cent of public expenditure will need to be justified.

'A festival of world-class music-making cannot live on reputation alone. We must prove that we make economic sense as well as giving aesthetic inspiration. Last year, an in-house survey calculated that every euro of State funding delivered over three euro of tourist revenue to Bantry.'

'This year,' Francis confirmed, 'we have asked the department of economics at University College Cork to do an independent economic impact survey on the three Bantry festivals. The results of this survey will inform our plans for the future and hopefully prove to the government that long-term investment in the arts provide measurable economic benefits to the community.'

Some final figures: an assessment of the 5,500 tickets sold proves that the West Cork Chamber Music Festival is a truly international festival. An estimated 27% of the audience comes from outside Ireland; 26% comes from outside Cork County; and the remainder comes from its loyal 'local' supporters.
